The Washington Treaty of 1922, designed to head off a potentially dangerous arms race between the major naval powers, agreed to legally binding limits on the numbers and sizes of the principal warship types. In doing so, it introduced a new constraint into naval architecture and sponsored many ingenious attempts to maximise the power of ships built within those restrictions. It effectively banned the construction of new battleships for a decade, but threw greater emphasis on large cruisers.rn This much is broadly understood by anyone with an interest in warships, but both the wider context of the treaty and the detail ramifications of its provisions are little understood. The approach of this book is novel in combining coverage of the political and strategic background of the treaty – and the subsequent London Treaty of 1930 – with analysis of exactly how the navies of Britain, the USA, Japan, France and Italy responded, in terms of the types of warships they built and the precise characteristics of those designs. This was not just a matter of capital ships and cruisers, but also influenced the development of super-destroyers and large submarines. Now for the first time warship enthusiasts and historians can understand fully the rationale behind much of inter-war naval procurement. The Washington Treaty was a watershed, and this book provides an important insight into its full significance. Building Construction Handbook is an authoritative reference for all construction students and professionals. It is full of detailed drawings that clearly illustrate the construction of building elements. The principles and processes of construction are explained with the concepts of design included where appropriate. Extensive coverage of building construction practice and techniques, representing both traditional procedures and modern developments, are also included to provide the most comprehensive and easy to understand guide to building construction. This new edition has been updated to reflect the 2011 changes to the building regulations, as well as new material on energy performance, and substantial revisions of the section on structures. While a large number of books have dealt with the navies and war at sea during the World Wars, the immediate aftermaths have generally received only minimal coverage. However, the fates of defeated navies are of enormous interest from a number of perspectives. These include the relative priorities of the victorious powers, acquisition and testing of ex-enemy materiel and the intended future capabilities of those ex-enemy navies that were to be allowed to continue to exist. This new book traces the histories of navies and ships of the defeated powers from the months leading up to the relevant armistices or surrenders through to the final execution of the appropriate post-war settlements. In doing so, it discusses the way in which the victorious powers reached their final demands, how these were implemented, and to what effect. The later histories of ships that saw subsequent service, either in their original navies or in those navies which acquired them, are also described. In doing this, much use is made of material drawn from archival, and in some cases archaeological, sources, some of which has never previously been used. Through these, a wide range of long-standing myths are busted, and some badly distorted modern views and assessments of events in the wake of the conflicts put right. The fascinating narrative will be accompanied by tabulated lists of all major navy-built (and certain significant ex-mercantile) enemy ships in commission at the relevant date of the armistice or surrender, or whose hulks were specifically listed for attention in post-Second World War allied agreements. These will include key dates in their careers and their ultimate fates. This highly original book, drawing on archaeological evidence as well as archival sources, and including numerous photographs will become an essential reference tool for all those interested in the naval history of the two World Wars. El pico de la pandemia del COVID19 coincidió en España con el final del invierno e inicio de la primavera. Una vez superada la fase de confinamiento absoluto, fue posible salir a pasear durante unas franjas horarias determinadas. Dado que las posibilidades de movilidad eran limitadas, pensé en iniciar un proyecto fotográfico con un hilo conductor claro. Puesto que iba a fotografiar flores, decidí usar mi lente 100mm macro con prioridad a la apertura de diafragma 2.8, dejando que la cámara estableciera la velocidad i la ISO más adecuada. El leitmotiv fue aprovechar la escasa profundidad de campo para centrar la vista del espectador en un punto determinado. En ocasiones, dado el pequeño tamaño de la flor, ese punto era toda ella, desenfocando al máximo su entorno. The hardest time of the COVID19 pandemic coincided, in Spain, with the end of winter and the beginning of spring. Once the phase of absolute lockdown was over, it was possible to go for a walk during some time slots. Since the possibilities of mobility were limited, I thought about starting a photographic project with a clear thread. Since I was going to shoot flowers, I decided to use my 100mm macro lens with the aperture priority set to 2.8, leaving the camera to set the most appropriate speed and ISO. To take advantage of the shallow depth of field to focus the viewer's view on a certain point was the leitmotif of this project. Sometimes, given the small size of the flower, that focus point was the whole flower, blurring its surroundings as much as possible.
